LINEAR TIME INVARIANT \(LTI\) SYSTEMS AND MATCHED FILTER 1

Intuitive Guide to Principles of Communicationswww.complextoreal.com Linear Time Invariant (LTI) Systems and Matched FilterMatched filter is a theoretical frame work and not the name of a specific type of filter. It is an ideal filter which processes a received signal to minimize the effect of noise. Hence, it maximizes the signal to noise ratio (SNR) of the filtered signal. Lets start by assuming th...

Chapter 6 Matched Filter and the Radar Ambiguity Function6.1. The Matched Filter SNR The most unique characteristic of the matched filter is that it produces the maximum achievable instantaneous SNR at its output when a signal plus additive white noise are present at the input. The noise does not need to be Gaussian. The peak instantaneous SNR at the receiver output can be achieved by matching the...
